

Renters Flood Insurance

Your landlord's insurance or renters insurance does not cover your personal property in a flood.

On average, about 40% of all NFIP claims come from outside high-risk flood areas.

Towns, cities, and their suburbs have more development, more concrete, and fewer places for water to go. That means a hard rain can become a flash flood in minutes.

Low-cost renters insurance, also called contents coverage, can start at $100 a year and potentially protect renters from thousands of dollars in flood damages.

If you are a renter you can protect your personal property up to $100,000 by purchasing a flood insurance policy.

In most cases, flood insurance takes effect 30 days after purchase. Make sure you have coverage well ahead of an event, contact your agent to purchase a policy today.
